SALEM COUNTY FREEHOLDERS HIRES NEW MENTAL HEALTH BOARD DIRECTOR

(SALEM, NJ) – Freeholder Director Lee Ware announced today that Arnold G. Bradway, has been hired as the new Salem County Mental Health Board Director. Mr. Bradway will head up the Salem County Mental Health Board and the Salem County Youth Services Commission.

"We are dedicated to hiring well-qualified professionals to serve Salem County residents particularly those with Salem County roots", said Director Ware.

Mr. Bradway and his wife reside in Hancock's Bridge. He is originally from Elmer, NJ and resided in South Jersey until moving to attend college to earn his Bachelor's degree from Union College, in Barbourville, Kentucky and his Master's Degree in Clinical Psychology from Morehead State University in Kentucky. He was employed by the State of Kentucky, Cabinet for Health & Family Services. There he was the Social Service/Treatment Specialist for the Gateway & Buffalo Trace Regions. His main responsibilities included case consultation to field office supervisors and social workers in a ten county region regarding the identification of psychiatric, sexual abuse and other treatment needs, with additional referrals to community partners.

Freeholder Jeffery J. Hogan, Chairman of the Health & Social Services Committee said, "He is definitely the man for the job. His qualifications are superb and his goals align well with the Freeholder Boards' goals for quality of life in Salem County'.

Mr. Bradway is the recipient of the Kentucky IMPACT, "Chris Walker Award." He is a member of the Ronin Bushido Karate Club. He has been a featured speaker at the annual Mental Health Institute is Louisville, Kentucky, presenting workshops on stress prevention and meditation.
